SoftGrid® Acoustical Ceiling Systems

Arktura's SoftGrid® line of acoustical systems opens up a multitude of scalable, easy-to-implement possibilities for design and acoustical impact, all while effortlessly accommodating and enhancing new and existing structural, HVAC, and lighting elements. Choose from a growing library of styles, including three new hexagonal designs, Flux, Deca, and Orbit. All are constructed from our high-performance Soft Sound® acoustical material, NRC rated up to 0.9, and available in a wide variety of colors and finishes, including wood-grain textures. Modules offer simple field trimability and flexible modularity to easily bring dynamic design and noise reduction to any space.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Looking forward, it is time to start thinking about the Convention in Las Vegas,
Nevada, March 23-26, 2020.

BY KELLY JOHNSON, SPECIFIED., 2019-2020 PRESIDENT

Hello, everyone. We just returned from an outstanding Fall Conference in Nashville where CISCA experienced record attendance in both membership participation and vendors for the Product Showcase. Thank you, all! We enjoyed great weather, food and fun, with many of us taking advantage of the evening festivities and live venues on Broadway.

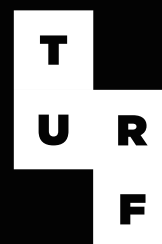

The Emerging Leaders Group showed up in force and were well represented with more than 30 members in attendance during the Conference. The EL group and Board met again for an open forum Q&A session which has become something we all look forward to each year.

The Board and EC also took advantage of this time, spending some very productive days meeting prior to the Conference. We reviewed current items as well as working on strategies for three-plus years out. What a dynamic group of individuals we have serving the CISCA organization whose foresight and long-term strategy are paramount.

The education sessions were well planned and attended. With subject matters ranging from technical panel discussions to learning how to capitalize on your strengths, the topics and sessions in the Fall Conference were very productive and chocked full of relevant insights that can be utilized and implemented in many facets of our business.

As we get closer to our National Convention, the platform for the Construction Excellence Awards entries will be open shortly. We encourage you to review the projects you completed last year and submit the three or four you like the best. All winners are listed in the magazine and video at the convention. The winners will be announced during dinner, March 24.

Looking forward, it is time to start thinking about the Convention in Las Vegas, Nevada, March 23-26, 2020. The Events Committee is hard at work on the details so look for more information soon, but for now, mark your calendars so you save the dates to attend OR you can register now for the Convention and secure a room so you don't forget! Check the CISCA website for registration information. ■

CORE PURPOSE

CISCA exists to provide the acoustical ceiling and wall systems industry with 24/7/365 expertise via diverse and state-of-the-art communication channels, interactive opportunities and regional and national events.

VISION

CISCA is the global premier authority for the interior construction and acoustical ceilings industry. CISCA fosters and enables professional development and exchanges for and between association members and industry professionals.

MISSION

Identify and address trends, diversity and growth of the industry and its members.

Communicate CISCA's vision to all members while fostering excitement and enthusiasm for a transformative, modern association experience. Offer a variety of collaboration and networking opportunities that will attract all CISCA audiences.

Create a structure within CISCA built on easy communication, visibility and accountability that allows volunteers and members to easily connect with the value of the association. Achieve standards of administration that are commensurate with the association's vision and focus on ensuring a positive experience for its volunteers.

Create modern two-way communication between CISCA audiences and the expertise of CISCA's members. Communication should be focused on education, current trends and the member knowledge base. Determine the next steps that allow CISCA to remain the authority in specialty interiors and acoustical ceilings using a modern mode of communication.

Turn down the noise and turn up Profitability.

A noisy work environment can take a toll on your business's profitability and decrease employee productivity. The new CISCA ROI Calculator tool evaluates just how much acoustical improvements can help optimize your bottom line. Visit cisca.org/ROIcal to learn more.

Valley Interior Systems Teams with Four Other CISCA Members on Health-Care Education Facility in Kentucky

BY NICK FORTUNA

If you were going to pick a state in which to build a technologically advanced health-care education center based on need, then Kentucky would be as good a choice as any. Kentucky ranks 45th in the nation in terms of health outcomes, according to the 2018 America's Health Rankings report, partially due to a dearth of qualified medical professionals in the state's rural communities.

Northern Kentucky University's Health Innovation Center, a 95,000-square-foot facility on the campus in Highland Heights, is taking aim at that low ranking by cranking out promising doctors, nurses and other health-care professionals. The $105-million facility, which opened to students in October 2018, is a showcase for the skill and professionalism of CISCA's member companies, with Cincinnati-based Valley Interior Systems collaborating with four other members to complete this high-profile project.

Construction materials were provided by Hunter Douglas; Armstrong Ceiling & Wall Solutions; and Gordon Inc., and the bulk of the materials were distributed by Interior Supply Inc.

"It really was a nice project," said Darrell Taulbee, project manager for Valley Interior Systems. "Successful people surround themselves with successful people, and in this particular case, it definitely worked out that way. In the end, you could really see the quality of the products, the quality of the individual manufacturers. It's definitely something to be proud of. We reached out to the best in the business that we knew would help us to be successful."

Funding for the Health Innovation Center included $97 million from the state, making it the biggest capital expenditure in Kentucky's 2014 budget. The other $8 million came from St. Elizabeth Healthcare, the system of Roman Catholic hospitals covering northern Kentucky. The new building is connected to Founders Hall, which got an extensive renovation as part of the project and now is home to the school's new Honors College, as well as to an Au Bon Pain restaurant and bakery.

The Health Innovation Center was designed to address regional health-care needs, including basic medical services for local residents, and gives students a state-of-the-art facility in which to learn, collaborate and practice for health-care careers. The five-story building includes 165 offices in addition to classroom spaces, laboratories and a two-story emergency room simulation center that is equivalent in size to a 48-bed hospital.

Visitors are greeted by a 6,000-square-foot exterior metal ceiling system with a shadow-line perimeter trim manufactured by Hunter Douglas. Featuring two types of torsion-spring hold-down clips on each tile, 12-gauge hanger-wire supports and uplift framing spaced two feet on center in each direction, this complex ceiling transcends the glass curtainwall system to cover another 4,300-square-foot section of the grand lobby. The Hunter Douglas ceiling system features lightweight perforated aluminum construction, an easy-to-install swing-down carrier system for quick access to the plenum and a poly-wrapped fiberglass infill for optimal acoustical control. It has no volatile organic compounds and includes up to 85 percent recycled aluminum.

Soaring 30 feet above the finished floor, the ceiling required a complex combination of scissor and boom lifts as well as scaffolding cantilevered over newly installed stadium seating and planted landscaping. Connected by a transition trim, the two adjacent 40,000-square-foot plank-and-tile ceilings appear to be simple to the untrained eye, but in reality, there are four different sizes of Armstrong Optima acoustic ceiling tiles among the many linear diffusers and lighting fixtures.

"Custom-sized panels are part of our DesignFlex program and are ideal for short turnaround times since they ship within three weeks," said Cindy O'Neill, manager of marketing communications for Armstrong. "These made-to-order sizes allowed for easy linear lighting fixture integration."

Smooth-textured Optima panels provide excellent acoustical absorption, scoring a Noise Reduction Coefficient of 0.95. "The high NRC addresses excessive noise you don't want in a healing environment," O'Neill said. Optima panels are washable and resistant to impact, scratches, soil and sagging. They include up to 71 percent recycled content and have a high light reflectance value of 90 percent, which allows the building to save energy by harvesting daylight, O'Neill said.

The grand lobby also features eight of the 50 full-height aluminum column covers provided by Gordon Inc. The column covers ranged in diameter from 20 to 28 inches and in height from 8 to 59 feet, and there were 14 different types, each with top, midlevel and base reveals. The column covers were made of 0.09-inch-thick aluminum and finished to the architect's specifications with a Kynar PPG Duranar Sunstorm finish coating.

Terry Sowers, executive vice president of operations and corporate services at Gordon Inc., said the project marked the first time Gordon used its new eConnect column cover attachment system. The system was designed for ease of installation to save time and manpower.

"I have worked in my former career as an installing contractor of ornamental metals, including column covers from various manufacturers," Sowers said. "We have taken this installation knowledge and applied it to our new eConnect attachment design. No other manufacturer of metal column covers has a better and more forgiving attachment system."

As visitors proceed through the main corridor, they approach a four-story atrium surrounded by cantilevered huddle spaces. The fourth floor is home to the egg-shaped Innovation Studio, furnished with 2,300 linear feet of felt baffles, measuring half an inch by 12 inches, suspended from a floating grid system. The baffles were manufactured in New Zealand by Autex and required four months to produce, ship and clear through customs.

Two adjacent meeting spaces are lined with 6,000 square feet of NovaWall stretch-fabric-wrapped fiberglass wall panels coming in six different colors. Each section was field cut and stretched and would require device and electrical-outlet cutouts after installation.

The drywall partitions in the new building and the renovation to Founders Hall got fiberglass batt insulation to reduce sound transmission, said Taulbee. Much of the building's exterior walls are glass, which readily deflects sound, so the atrium features sound-absorbing wooden panels, felt baffles and acoustic ceiling tiles.

Though there were very limited lay-down and storage areas, Taulbee said the project ran smoothly from start to finish. Reflecting on the end result, he ranked the Health Innovation Center among the five best projects of his 35-year career.

"I don't know how it could have turned out any better," he said. "The NKU campus traditionally has had concrete structures, but in the last 10 years, they've kind of taken a more innovative approach as far as the look. The materials used aren't really similar to the buildings surrounding it, but it does look like it belongs there. It doesn't look out of place. I think it's beautiful, myself."

Scott Watkins, sales manager for Interior Supply, said good communication between all the major players kept the project running smoothly.

"The installer makes the products look good," Watkins said. "When you have a big, open room like this, and you have a handful of different ceiling products that are blending together, it makes everything look that much better. Normally, you're used to seeing just white ceiling tile, and to have wood and metal and a lot of different specialty items come together and look that fluid is special to see." ■

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR ANNOUNCES NEW OVERTIME

Exemption Rules that Will Affect over 1 Million Employees

BY LAURYN E. PARKS, MOMKUS LLC

On September 24, 2019, the U.S. Department of Labor issued a revised Final Overtime Rule which will increase the minimum salary that an employee must receive in order to be classified as exempt from federal minimum wage and overtime requirements.

Under the Obama administration, the Department of Labor had attempted to increase the salary level required for the exemption from $23,660 to $47,476. However, this rule was invalidated by federal courts before it went into effect.

The final Department of Labor Rule announced on September 24, 2019, will increase the salary level required for exempt employees from $23,660 to $35,568 annually, or from $455 to $684 weekly. The current threshold of $23,700 was set by the George W. Bush administration and has remained unchanged for 15 years. Going forward, the Department of Labor will propose new salary minimums every four years.

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) requires that most employees in the United States be paid at least the federal minimum wage for all hours worked and overtime pay at no less than time and a half for all hours worked over 40 hours in a work week. However, Section 13(a)(1) of the FLSA provides an exemption from the minimum wage and overtime requirements for employees employed in certain executive, administrative or professional positions and outside sales employees.¹

In order to qualify for the exemption, the employee must meet certain tests regarding their job duties (the “duties test”) and be paid a salary that meets or exceeds a certain amount (the “salary test”). Previously, this minimum salary level had been $455 per week or $23,600 annually. Beginning in 2020, it will increase to $684 per week or $35,568 annually. Under the revised Final Overtime Rule, the “duties test” that exempt employees must pass remains unchanged.

The Department of Labor estimates that, under this new rule, at least 1.2 million workers who were previously classified as “exempt” will qualify as “non-exempt” and be eligible for overtime compensation because their salary does not meet the $35,568 threshold. For employees who no longer qualify as exempt, employers will have to start tracking their hours worked and pay them overtime for any hours worked in excess of 40 hours in a week.

Under the revised Final Overtime Rule, employers may use certain non-discretionary bonuses and incentive payments, including commissions, to reach up to 10 percent of the new minimum salary requirement. This will allow employees to meet the “salary test” in part through their bonus or commission. The rule also allows for a “catch-up” payment if the sum of an employee’s salary plus nondiscretionary incentive payments for the year fails to meet the applicable threshold, but such payment must be made by the first pay period after the end of the applicable year.

The FLSA also makes an exception for certain professionals with advanced degrees and highly-compensated workers. Highly compensated employees are exempt from minimum wage and overtime requirements if they meet a less stringent “minimal duties test.” Highly compensated employees must also receive a minimum annual salary which, under the revised federal Overtime Rule, will increase to $107,432, and which is the equivalent of the 80th percentile of full-time salaried workers nationwide. The revised Final Overtime Rule salary minimum for highly compensated employees is substantially less than the amount proposed under the enjoined 2016 rule, which proposed to increase the minimum salary to $134,004 for highly compensated employees.

It is important for employers to review their classifications of certain employees in light of these new regulations. It may be necessary to reclassify some employees as non-exempt and begin paying time and a half for any hours worked in excess of 40 hours per week. Alternatively, the salaries of some employees could be raised above the new salary threshold in order to continue their status as exempt from overtime requirements.

Inevitably, this will increase costs for employers and also require changes to policies and payroll practices. Reclassified employees will have to become accustomed to punching a clock and paying attention to their hours each day, and their managers will have to be more active in managing their schedules and workloads. Furthermore, formerly exempt employees who are used to working as many hours as are needed to get the job done will need to be trained on how to record all hours worked and avoid off-the-clock work. ■

Ceiling Solution
Spotlight #3 & #4

AXIOM[®] TRANSITIONS WITH DRYWALL GRID

Axiom[®] Transitions simplify and speed up installations through modular solutions that eliminate vertical framing to structure and reduce trade coordination. Designed for acoustical-to-acoustical, acoustical-to-drywall, drywall-to-drywall, and drywall-to-acoustical transitions. Select from 1", 2", 4", 6", 8", and 10" height transitions for straight, curved, and flush installs. Learn more about this crisp edge detail at armstrongceilings.com/transitions

Ceiling Solution Spotlights highlight time-saving techniques that can help keep every job on the mark, getting you on and off the job site faster.
