PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Will you complete a cool project this year? If you are on track, make sure to get it submitted for the 2018 Construction Excellence Awards program. Submissions are completed online and the website portal will be available soon.

BY PAUL GALLAGHER, C.J. COAKLEY CO., INC., 2017-2018 CISCA PRESIDENT

We had a very successful October Annual Fall Conference and Networking event in San Antonio, Texas. Great presentations on the economic forecast, hiring and retaining A-player employees, and financial tips were a few of the educational sessions. On the technology side, we had an immersion in VR (Virtual Reality) and BIM (Building Information Model), and some hands-on time with the latest headset gear in the market. It was truly a mind-altering experience to see how advanced this technology is and where the industry is headed. There was also a lot of recreation time — golf, live music, and eating along the famous San-Antonio river-walk. The event ended with a night in Austin that coincided with the Austin City Limits event. Thanks to all our attendees and sponsors who made this event such a success.

At the board meeting, a change to the CISCA Foundation by-laws was approved. This change allows the association to make donations in the case of natural disasters such as the recent hurricanes. The board also approved a disaster relief fund policy. These changes will allow CISCA to accept donations to our 501(c)(3) foundation in the future and distribute those in a disaster. These donations will be tax deductible to the contributors.

The Board also discussed its periodicals. We are well underway with updating many of our CISCA publications to make sure we are constantly providing subject matter expertise to support our contractors, manufacturers, distributors and sales forces. If you need information and cannot find it, please let us know. That might be in the next CISCA publication!

With this event in the rear-view mirror, it is time to start thinking about the 2018 CISCA Convention in Orlando, Florida, March 26-29, 2018. Walt Disney World offers much diversity and possibilities for convention attendees. Checkout the new and forthcoming offerings of our manufacturers. Get some specialized education and network with new and old acquaintances. This convention site provides an excellent opportunity to bring the family and make some personal memories while enjoying the company of colleagues and peers. Think Ceilings and Cinderella and no need to be Bashful or Grumpy! You're going to be Mad as a Hatter if you miss this one because it's going to be one Thumper of a convention. Apologies in advance if this wording is too Goofy for you. Plans are well underway for the event and we are looking to shake things up a little. Ladies or Tramps, rumor has it that there will be a swag bag giveaway at the convention dinner. Open wide your Mouse-ears, mark your calendar, and watch your email for more information.

Will you complete a cool project this year? If you are on track, make sure to get it submitted for the 2018 Construction Excellence Awards program. Submissions are completed online and the website portal will be available soon. All entries are recognized at dinner during the convention, in the magazine and on the CISCA website.

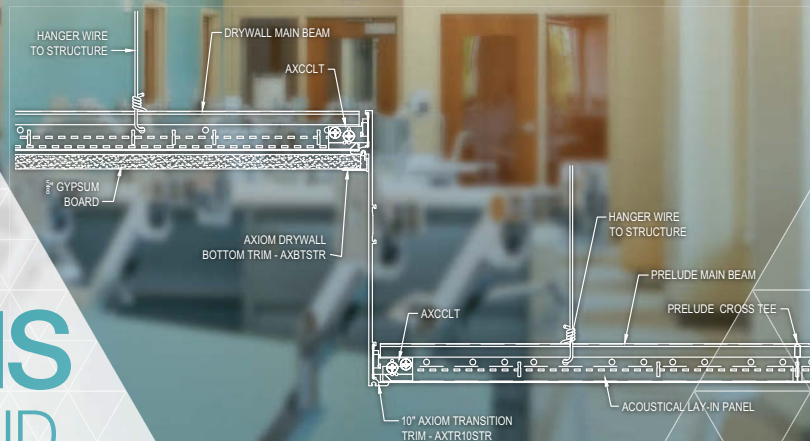

Now pause for just a second and look a little further into the future as we plan our Fall 2018 Networking event. I want to let you know about an exciting change which incorporates a mini-expo into our agenda. We will be reaching out to manufacturers in the next few weeks to finalize the format and organization. The location will be Denver, Colorado, October 3-6, 2018. We want to give attendees the opportunity to meet with the manufacturers in a relaxed atmosphere which allows ample time for a deep dive into their products. Integral with this will be more focused education events. Look for more information coming soon and mark your calendars for this Rocky Mountain High! ■

CATEGORY

OFFICE

Renovation or construction of office space

EDUCATION

Renovation or construction of a school or college

HEALTHCARE

Renovation or construction of a hospital or healthcare facility

RETAIL

Renovation or construction of a retail space such as a store or mall

CIVIC

Renovation or construction of an airport; government facility; museum; library; or other public building

BOUTIQUE

Unique interior projects less than 10,000 square feet

INTERNATIONAL

All projects outside of North America

NOTE: Entries submitted in the wrong category may be disqualified by the judges.

SIZE

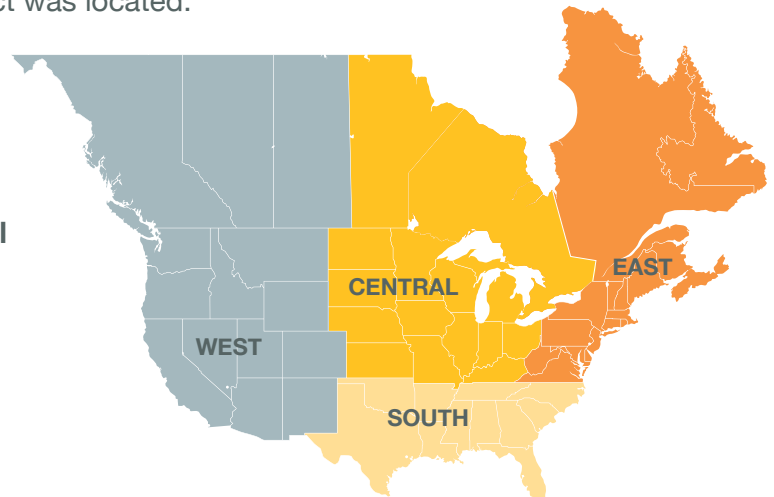

After selecting the category; the project will be submitted into one of two sub-categories (based on the size of the work done by the contractor):

- Larger than 50,000 square feet
- Smaller than 50,000 square feet

REGION

The project then is entered into a region based on where the project was located:

- West
- East
- South
- Central

AWARD TYPES

One winner—GOLD—will be awarded in each region. For example, there will be one winner for the office category/50,000 square feet and above/west region.

The Judges Award will be selected from the three projects who received the highest overall points during the judging process.

People's Choice Award – After the judges have judged, members will be able to vote for their favorite project.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS

- The submitting company must be a CISCA member by the date of submission.
- Installing contractor must be a member of CISCA
- Projects must be completed within 18 months of the date due and not have been previously submitted.
- No project may be submitted in more than one category by the same company.
- Winning projects will receive one crystal award. Additional awards may be purchased.

FEES

- $400 fee if submitted by January 12, 2018
- $750 fee if submitted between January 13 and January 31, 2018

All required material must be submitted online. The following material is required:

- Photos of the Completed Project – maximum of 10 photos, minimum of 5 photos. 300 dpi or higher.
 - Category, Size and Region must be selected for each project.
 - Photos of the project during construction should be included as they are helpful for judging.
 - Entry Form (attached for reference)
 - Short Paragraph (150 words) to use in the awards program, magazine, and on the website. You may use company and project names in this paragraph.
 - Long Paragraph (up to 500 words) for the judges. This should clearly describe the challenges faced with the project. Tell the judges why this project should win. No names of companies or projects are to be used.
- HINT: When thinking about what to include regarding job conditions, consider the challenges a job site might present to the contractor with regards to a difficult space to work within (lots of other tradesmen and equipment working at the same time making installation more difficult); Unusual heights and the complexity of installation due to these heights or other extreme unusual outside influences that challenged the installation process. Do not simply state that “the job had a short time frame for installation” or something of that nature. Provide detailed information that allows the judges to understand the conditions.*
- Photo Caption to give any needed explanation on the pictures.
 - Video – No longer than 5 minutes in length is optional. Videos are encouraged and will be shown at the Awards Dinner.

ree Kysela has a panoramic photograph of US Bank Stadium in Minneapolis, MN, over the couch in his office. It's a reminder of the integral part he and the two companies of which he is president had in the stadium's construction.

It took creativity, tenaciousness and daring, but the combined talents of the installing contractor, Sports Facility Acoustics, Inc., and the manufacturer, MBI Products Company, Inc. pulled it off. The result earned them CISCA's Gold award for construction excellence in a civic project of more than 50,000 square feet.

"This was our largest project to date," says Kristen McIntire, Sports Facility Acoustics' project coordinator on the job, "it was huge." At 270 feet at its highest point, the US Bank Stadium also was Sports Facility Acoustics' tallest.

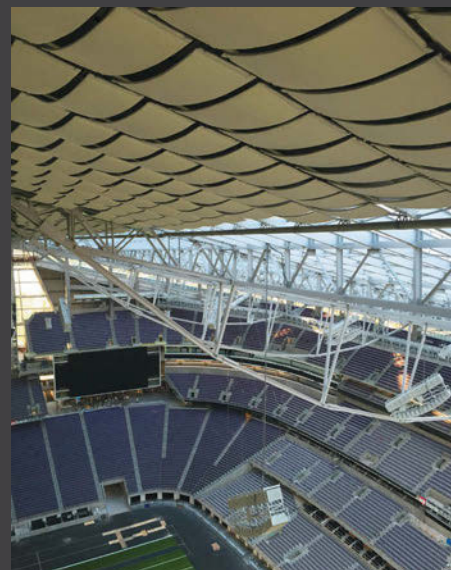

That is saying something for a company that has worked on indoor sports facilities in the continental United States, Canada, Puerto Rico and Berlin, Germany. "The typical facility has about 20,000 seats," says Kysela. US Bank Stadium, however, has 66,655 seats.

Nicknamed by the crew as the "Modern Marvel," the US Bank Stadium is the home to the National Football League's Minnesota Vikings football team. The project originally was estimated at four months, but ended up taking seven and, even then, they worked two shifts, nearly round the clock to finish it.

The stadium was designed with ETFE (Ethylene tetrafluoroethylene) plastic glass polymer roof and walls taking up about half the expanse, with metal girders and I-beams on portions designated for the acoustical tiles, comprising the other half. "Sound bounces off both," says McIntire. Designed and normally used for indoor facilities housing NBA and NFL teams, the acoustic panels are specially made to absorb the kind of sound that emanates not only from excited fans, but from other uses as concerts and special events.

Known as Lapendary® panels, they can be hung in a loosely curved manner or installed flush to the roof deck for a flat appearance. MBI developed the original panels in the 1980s in response to a growing demand for proper acoustics in indoor venues, such as arenas and other multi-purpose facilities.

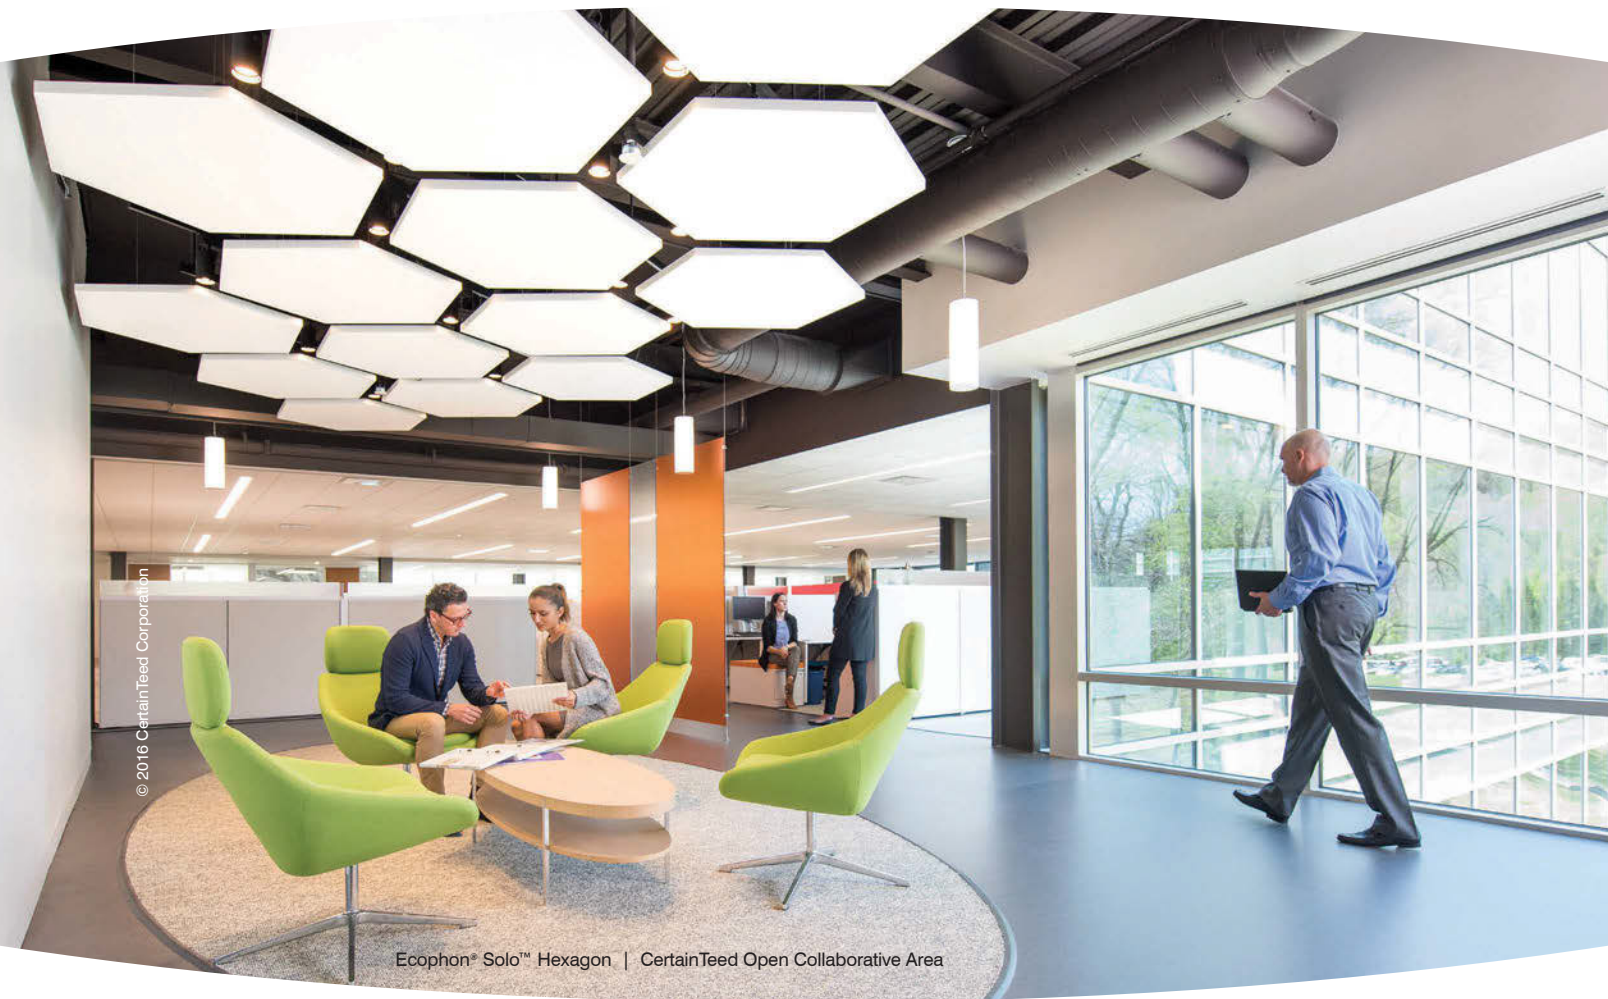

It's the hanging that requires some daring. Sports Facility Acoustics employs "riggers" or climbers, many of whom acquired their skills as amateur rock climbers. When not swinging from the rafters and beams to install panels on the roofs of arenas or indoor stadiums, they hang large speakers, lights and other equipment prior to concerts and special events.

Kysela estimates that they used between 30 and 40 climbers between the ceiling and the walls. The 3,500 Lapendary panels cover the ceiling area above about half the field and half of the seats. In this case, the biggest challenge was first getting the panels into the building and then out to the climbers.

The panels are bundled two to a package, with each package weighing about 25 pounds. At about 4 feet tall by 2 feet in diameter, they also were bulky. Almost nothing could be stored on site, resulting in daily deliveries. There was only one loading dock in the facility and only two elevators. Those also had to be used by all the other trades.

To handle it, there were workers whose full-time job was logistics. The general contractor initiated 6 a.m. safety meetings to lay out the POD or plan of the day. It was required attendance for the captains or foremen from each of the trades working on the stadium. "If you weren't at the POD, you didn't know what was going on," says McIntire. Shifts began at 7 a.m.

More often than not, Sports Facility Acoustics workers were hand carrying the 25-pound packages through the concrete corridors, up the winding steps to the mezzanine floor, because other trades needed the elevators. It was all hands on deck and McIntire was one of those doing the carrying.

Once there, they had to get the panels out to the riggers, who were swinging from the rafters above the middle of the stadium. To do that they created a sort of trolley system, made of aircraft cable. The packages were carried along inclined catwalks and rope access technicians would send the material flying horizontally on the trolley system to the crews.

Making matters even more challenging, the roof was at a steep pitch, in line with the stadium's overall design, which is a Viking ship.

The walls were of equal challenge to the ceilings. "The interior walls were hundreds of feet high, came at different angles and some were inverted to give it the characteristics of a Viking ship," says McIntire. They were first covered with black fiberglass, then with a strong, coarse beige colored fabric known as scrim. They used about 60,000 square feet of material on the walls.

Every panel was custom and all measures were taken on site. Sports Facility Acoustics entered the measurements into their drawings, which they then brought into the field with them. They hand cut and trimmed the material at the stadium. "Anywhere we could put acoustic material, we did, except for over the glass," says McIntire.

Because riggers were working adjacent to and, in some cases, above glass where it was tilted, every tool had to be tied off and every screw held tight. A dropped tool could mean broken glass and broken glass is expensive. There were no such mishaps, says McIntire.

"It takes a lot of strength and skill to get up there," says McIntire. "If it wasn't for our climbers, we couldn't do this. We took our best climbers and put them at the highest points."

Not only the best climbers, but Kysela, clad in a hard hat and boots, was on site daily. "It was great seeing my boss take it to a very personal level," says McIntire. "We are a team." ■

How Mechanic's Liens Work — An Overview

BY LAURYN E. PARKS, PARTNER, MOMKUS MCCLUSKEY ROBERTS, LLC

All too often, suppliers provide services and materials to improve real property, but are left unpaid when funding for the project dries up. If the party that supplied goods and services had a contract with the owner, the supplier is considered to be in “privity of contract” with the owner and can file a lawsuit for breach of contract. However, what if the supplier contracted with the general contractor and not with the owner? Or what if the supplier knows that the owner does not have any money to pay and that the owner’s only asset of any significant value is the real property?

In those cases, the supplier should consider asserting a mechanic’s lien in the state where the real property is located. Each state has its own statutory rules about how and when a supplier should go about filing a mechanic’s lien. If the supplier meets the statute’s requirements and files a timely mechanic’s lien, the lien will create rights in the owner’s property. In some cases, if the owner does not have the money to pay the suppliers, a lawsuit is filed and the real property can be foreclosed upon and sold in order to pay the mechanic’s lien holders.

Alternatively, most states allow an interested party to bond over a mechanic’s lien. When this happens, the supplier no longer has a lien against the real property, but it does have recourse to the surety company to get paid.

Contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers, equipment renters, workers, architects, engineers, surveyors and others who contribute services and materials to a construction project are typically entitled to file a mechanic’s lien for the value of their work.

Most states require that, as a precursor to filing a mechanic’s lien, the supplier provide the owner with notice by a certain date either prior to or shortly after providing goods and services. These notice requirements are often a trap for the unwary. Suppliers generally assume that they will be paid for their services and never consider the need to file a mechanic’s lien (and send out advance notice to the owner) until months after these early deadlines have passed.

The purpose of requiring that owners be given notice of all the suppliers on a project is to allow an owner to protect itself by requiring that lien waivers be executed prior to distributing funds to the contractor.

The form of the supplier’s notice to the owner will vary from state to state, but it is generally a certified letter to the owner, lender and/or general contractor that advises that the supplier intends (or has already begun) to provide services or materials on the project.

At a later specified point in time, the supplier is required to give notice in the form of a claim that there has been a failure to make a timely payment. The claim must be given within a certain time period after the goods or services were supplied.

If the notice and claim are properly and timely issued, then the supplier can file its mechanic’s lien. The lien must contain certain information, including the amount of money owed, a description of the services rendered or materials provided, and a legal description of the real property that was improved. Typically, the lien must be sworn to and signed by a representative of the claimant. Then the lien is usually filed in the recorder’s office of the county where the real property is located.

However, filing the lien alone will not guarantee payment. If the owner cannot or will not pay the supplier, the supplier must file a legal action seeking the sale of the property in order to satisfy the amount it is owed. The supplier will be expected to prove at trial that it performed the work that is claimed. But if it is able to do so, and if the owner is not able to present a successful defense as to why the supplier should not be paid, the property may be sold or auctioned off in order to pay the supplier.

Mechanic’s lien statutes are universally complex and require strict compliance with their rules and deadlines in order for the lien to be effective. However, an effective mechanic’s lien can provide the supplier with security and a method of collection that it would not otherwise be entitled to. ■

SETTING LIMITS ON SOUND

From airports to schools and conference centers, SoundTex® provides optimal sound absorption without compromising design possibilities. The flexible, ultra-thin nonwoven provides noise control, easy installation, and low thermal insulation properties making it ideal for acoustic ceilings with integrated heated and cooling systems. See why SoundTex® is the choice of architects world wide at www.freudenberg-pm.com.
